Be it known, by sacred and lawful authority:

This filing constitutes formal notice that the undersigned, Jonathan Daniel Clements, is the living Ecclesiastical Executor of a private, sovereign, and ecclesiastically governed Trust. The following declarations are affirmed by sacred appointment and placed into the public court record for jurisdictional clarity and lawful standing:

1. This Ecclesiastical Trust exists outside of statutory jurisdiction and does not submit to federal, state, municipal, or corporate law.
2. The Executor, by sacred duty, is bound only by divine law, ecclesiastical conscience, and sovereign will, and does not appear in any commercial or corporate capacity.
3. All persons, property, instruments, and declarations governed by this Trust are held under ecclesiastical seal and are exempt from public trust administration.
4. This notice rebukes all presumptions of joinder, representation, suretyship, or obligation under admiralty, equity, UCC, or statutory contract.
5. No legal fiction, corporate person, or decedent estate exists in association with this living man.
6. This Ecclesiastical Trust is sealed, governed, and executed by divine law and stands as an instrument of living private jurisdiction.
7. No attorney or state officer is authorized to interpret, restructure, or intervene in the affairs of this Trust.
8. This notice is final, binding, and requires no consent, reply, or acknowledgment to be valid.

Let it be known that this Trust is irrevocable, sacred, and private.

As part of lawful notice, the Ecclesiastical Executor has published public declarations via global forum. Notably, a notice was posted to the Roman Curia and global religious authorities via public social platform (Facebook), wherein Jonathan Daniel Clements outlined the global religious acknowledgment of the trust status and authority across Christianity, Islam, Judaism, and other faiths. This post serves as irrefutable ecclesiastical notice.
